Red Spinach (Amaranthus dubius): Source for Nitric Oxide Production, Cardiovascular Health, Relaxation of Smooth Muscle, Immunity and Eye Health. Contains naturally occurring (NO₃) which are a source of Nitric Oxide (NO).

Leuzeae Carthamoides: (95% beta ecdysterone): Studies in Eastern Europe and Russia found that ecdysterone possessed a wide spectrum of anabolic effects on skeletal muscle. Biochemists have classified ecdysterone as biologically-active phytoecdysteroid substance which can exert anabolic actions in the body.

Benfotiamine: A fat-soluble form of vitamin B1 (thiamine), supports healthy blood sugar metabolism and helps protect the body's tissues against advanced glycation end products and oxidative stress. Overall, benfotiamine can activate glucose metabolism and promote healthy blood glucose levels in those already within normal range. Benfotiamine also helps maintain healthy endothelial function and supports the health of the nerves, kidneys, eyes, blood vessels, and heart.

Nattokinase: A systemic enzyme isolated from the traditional Japanese soy food natto, has been shown to support healthy blood flow by assisting the circulatory clearing system of the body. More recently, both clinical and non-clinical studies have demonstrated that nattokinase supports heart health and promotes healthy circulation.

Quercetin: An antioxidant flavonoid found in many different fruits and vegetables, Recent research on trained athletes and people just beginning a regimen of physical activity showed that supplemental Quercetin improves endurance, recovery and enhances performance. In addition to being an antioxidant, Quercetin also has anti-inflammatory properties.
